Women Who Light The Dark

Photojournalist Paolo Gianturco's new book, Women Who Light The Dark, delves into the lives of exceptional women across the globe that turn their darkest hours into a smattering of glorious achievements. Gianturco meets local women who work together to tackle hefty issues such as domestic violence, sex trafficking, war, poverty, illiteracy, discrimination, inequality, malnutrition and disease. Not only do they struggle with these issues on a daily basis, but also they do so with few material resources. Traveling from Morocco to Zimbabwe, Nicaragua to Cameroon, Gianturco interacts with these amazing women and learns about their strengths and passions. From over 15 countries in five continents, the stories and images of these 129 women will inspire readers the world over.
